Cops probe city's latest homicide

► Man fatally stabbed during party in a west-end apartment, according to police

Homicide detectives are investigating after a 27-year-old man died following a fight at a west-end apartment Saturday night.

The third floor was taped off and markers could be seen on the building's entry door yesterday as homicide and forensics investigators gathered evidence.

Police said they were called just after 10 p.m. to the Baywood Apartments building.

The man, who was allegedly stabbed, died later in the Royal Alexandra hospital.

April Ledger called police after hearing a thud that sounded like someone falling down the stairs.

Ledger said her building's residents are generally respectful

Cops charge man after high-speed chase

A 21-year-old Lethbridge man is facing numerous charges after allegedly leading police on a high-speed chase in a stolen car.

RCMP were notified of the stolen vehicle travelling out of Lethbridge at a high rate of speed and Fort Macleod and Claresholm RCMP deployed a spike belt, which the suspect avoided, police said.

Police said the vehicle was clocked at 160 km/h in a 70 zone, and RCMP chased the car north of Nanton where another spike belt was laid and the highway closed. When the driver attempted to avoid the belt, he hit the ditch and rolled. The car then burst into flames, police said. The driver sustained minor injuries and was taken into custody. ● METRO

Suspects sought in graffiti spree

RCMP in St. Albert are looking for one or more suspects in a graffiti spree on and near the Kinex and Akinsdale arenas last week.

According to police, the side, front and rear doors of the arenas and several areas around the arenas along Atwood Drive and Abbey Crescent had gold spray all over them.

The RCMP are looking for the public's help on this and are asking anyone with information to call 780-458-7700. ● METRO

Second-choice candidate could be key in Tory race

Some Alberta voters could have more of an impact on the race for premier with their second-choice candidate, analysts say.

If Gary Mar, Alison Redford or Doug Horner are not able to top the 50 per cent mark on the second ballot Oct. 1, the third-place finisher's votes are given to whomever supporters indicated as their second choice.

Mar earned nearly 41 per cent of votes cast in the first ballot Saturday, but he is not unbeatable, said Calgary political scientist Keith Brownsey, who believes the second-choice provision favours Redford, the former justice minister. "There's no telling in this process," he said. "It happened in 2006 and it's how the province got Ed Stelmach."

Stelmach, the outgoing premier, was the overwhelming second choice on ballots that favoured Ted Morton in the last Tory race, and used that support to push past fellow candidate Jim Dinning.

Redford said name recognition may have served some of her rivals better early on, but be-

► Gary Mar expressed concern yesterday over low voter turnout (59,361) Saturday night in the first Tory ballot. "As leader, I would be fully committed to re-engaging Albertans about the things that are important to them," he said.

► When asked about the second-choice ballot provision yesterday, former deputy premier Doug Horner said his campaign is targeting first-choice supporters and is focused on getting them to the polls Oct. 1.

But Edmonton political scientist Chaldea Men-sah believes Mar would do very well as the second choice on ballots.

"His support is cross-cutting the divides in the party — north, south, rural and urban," he said.

SEX ASSAULT

Woman groped in Southgate

Edmonton police are looking for a bald Asian man in his mid-20s wearing thin-frame metal glasses, a black jacket and long black basketball-style shorts, after an alleged sex assault in the Southgate area Thursday.

According to police, the suspect approached a 19-year-old woman on the pedestrian bridge at 114 Street and Whitemud Drive. The man hopped off his bike and exposed himself to the woman, police say, then followed her and allegedly groped her in a sexual manner.

Police are still interviewing witnesses and are asking for the public's assistance. Call 780-423-4567 if you have any information.

Hundreds showed their support for those affected by HIV in Edmonton's annual AIDS Walk for Life, yesterday.

A pancake breakfast fuelled up a turnout of about 500 individuals and teams for the five-kilometre jaunt from Churchill Square.

Though final numbers were still being tallied, early estimates pointed to stepped-up funds this year.

"We're about $15,000 ahead of target," said Joyce LaBriola, Edmonton's AIDS Walk consultant. "Usually, we're at about $68,000, but we were at $82,000 this morning."

Omnibus tops Commons agenda

► Parliamentarians are back to work today
 ► It's the first chance the Conservatives have to move on their law-and-order election promises

 JESSICA SMITH
 @METRONEWS.CA
 METRO CANADA IN OTTAWA

The Conservatives are set to introduce a massive omnibus bill on terrorism, youth crime, wiretapping and other planks of their tough-on-crime platform.

Terrorism tops the list. The Tories campaigned on allowing victims to sue terrorists and supporters.

Two controversial temporary anti-terrorism measures implemented after 9-11 will be reintroduced, Prime Minister Stephen Harper said in a recent TV interview.

Crime legislation — on young offenders, sentencing and child predators — that was introduced but not passed before the election is also expected.

The opposition parties are already raising alarms. The New Democrats say measures that would allow law enforcement to monitor Internet activity without a warrant will amount to “legalized widespread snooping on average citizens.” The Tories say the measures will give law enforcement agencies “up-to-date tools” to fight crime.

The bill

Here's what the omnibus bill is expected to do on:

TERRORISM

- Allow police to detain terrorism suspects for up to three days without charges.
- Let judges jail witnesses who won't testify about terrorism.

YOUTH CRIME

- Simplify pre-trial detention rules so youths accused of serious crimes — including property crimes over $5,000, sexual exploitation and murder — can be jailed before trial.
- Expand “violent offence” definition so youths who endanger public safety during a crime can be jailed.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

- Make telecom providers install surveillance software, allowing police to track Internet and mobile-phone activity.
- Make telecoms disclose customer information to authorities.

SENTENCING

- End house arrest for perpetrators of violent crimes, including sexual assault.
- End pardons for sexual assaults on minors, offenders with three convictions prosecuted by indictment.

CHILD MOLESTATION

- Create or increase mandatory minimum jail time for certain sexual offences involving children.

The first version of Canada's new electronic passport carries a hefty price tag — an ominous sign that the general version being issued late next year might cost triple or more what Canadians pay today.

Since January 2009 the federal government has issued 40,000 so-called ePassports to government officials and diplomats.

An expense claim filed by Prime Minister Stephen Harper indicates the cost of the diplomatic version is far more than the $87 that adult Canadians pay now. Harper purchased four diplomatic ePassports for himself, his wife and two children, at $225 each.

The tiny country known for sun-baked islands and historic ruins seems unlikely as the trigger for the next global economic tsunami.

Yet just as the startling collapse of Lehman was followed by the worst recession in six decades, a Greek default has the potential to send the world tumbling.

Already owing about 150 per cent its annual economic output, Greece has said it has enough cash to carry its debt to mid-October, by which time it will need about $8 billion to stave off default. Eventually, its partners in the 17-country euro-zone will balk at extending more of their money.

Jobs over austerity: Obama

► Plan proposes minimum tax rate for earners of more than $1 million

Even as President Barack Obama prepares his opening bid on long-term debt reduction, the White House wants to keep the focus on jobs and is determined to avoid getting sucked into another budget fight with lawmakers.

Administration officials see the task of attending to deficits as necessary but not necessarily urgent, compared with the need to revive the economy and increase employment. The White House also sees this as the time to draw sharp contrasts with Republicans. So when Obama announces at least $2 trillion in deficit reduction measures today, he is not expected to offer all the compromises he reached with House Speaker John Boehner in July.

The plan represents an economic bookend to the $447 billion in tax cuts and new public works spending that Obama has proposed to as a short-term measure to stimulate the economy and create jobs.

EDMONTON CULTURE IN YOUR VIEW

URBAN COMPASS

TERENCE HARDING
METRO EDMONTON

Quick, name an Edmonton painter.

Edmontonians often talk about what a hotbed of creativity this city is, but few of us know just who the creatives are and what contribution they make to the cultural life of Edmonton.

Too many of us self-edit and assume that somehow painting, poetry, sculpture, dance and theatre are things meant for other people and not for us.

That is certainly the case with paintings.

If you go to gallery openings, you are likely to see the same people each time.

I can understand that. Often, what is exhibited isn't very accessible to the average person.

They cannot understand why a big red dot or broad horizontal bands of colour are considered great works of art. It's time to start changing that, and you can do so by going to see Gordon Harper's painting exhibition Temporary City at the Peter Robertson Gallery.

Harper's work is quite accessible and is very likely to resonate with you. He has chosen to paint the ordinary and turn it into something extraordinary. That is what a good artist does.

His paintings of abandoned homes in the city give them a mystery and dignity that is surprising and compels you to think about the lives that have unfolded in their interiors and what the future holds for them.

The odds are pretty good that you will find a painting of a house that you have passed by on the bus or in your car.

If you come up 105th Street on the way to work, you will immediately recognize Harper's painting of two houses that have been demolished to make way for a new development.

If you live in Belgravia, you will probably recognize houses that were razed to make way for the LRT extension. And if you live in the Northeast you will see some very familiar properties.

If you don't want to take the chance that you are going to see something that will not interest you, go to probertsongallery.com and take a look at some of his work online.

But don't be fooled into thinking that you have actually seen his paintings. I think you would be surprised at just how moving the real paintings actually are.

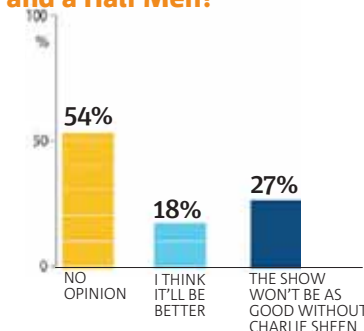

Harper's show runs from Sept. 22-Oct. 11, with the opening reception on Thursday, Sept. 22 from 7 p.m.-9 p.m.

The gallery is at 12304 Jasper Ave.

Why are people starving to death in Somalia, Ethiopia and Kenya? The world has no shortage of food. Americans, Canadians and Europeans are dying of diabetes, cholesterol and obesity. The western countries are consuming too much food at the expense of the rest of the planet. Just to feed our appetite for meat requires huge amounts of agricultural land to grow plant-based feed to fatten livestock animals.

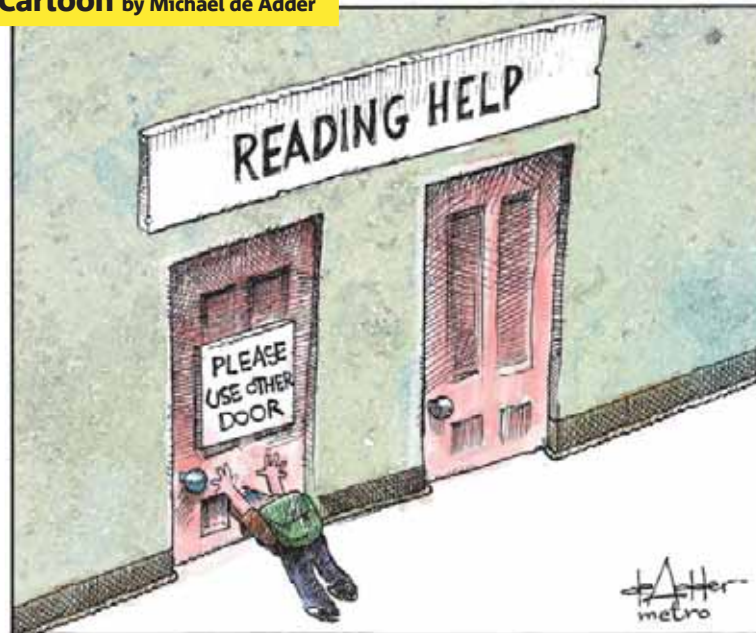

We are on a downward spiral. We treat our pet rocks and gardens better than children and people experiencing real human suffering.

Decisions are made all for the sake of money, power and privilege, or should I say control of oil and resources.

I hate to go all Jesus on you, but Christ did say that it is easier for a camel to go through an eye of a needle than a rich man to enter the Kingdom of God. This biblical quote makes a lot of sense. Greed is a sin and it has played a major part in shaping the world and its citizens into either haves or have nots.

Recovered message in a bottle a 'miracle'

A Japanese teenager expressed her gratitude yesterday after a U.S. sailor in Hawaii found a bottle she had tossed into the sea off Japan's southern coast as a child.

Saki Arikawa, 17, said she had almost forgotten about the bottle and initially couldn't believe it was found after five years.

She said "it's a miracle" the bottle was found. "It's incredible," she said.

The clear glass bottle was found Thursday by Navy Petty Officer Jon Moore during a beach cleanup at the Pacific Missile Range Facility on Kauai island.

The bottle contained four origami cranes — symbols of peace in Japan — as well as a photo of Arikawa's elementary school class and a note dated March 25, 2006, and signed by Arikawa saying she wanted it to be "a graduation memory."

The bottle was one of five she tossed into the ocean in 2006 as her sixth-grade class graduated from Kokubu Elementary School in Kagoshima. Three other bottles had previously been recovered, including two in Alaska and a third at another location in Hawaii. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dolphin-friendly Freeman

► Actor Morgan Freeman talks about working with Winter the dolphin in Dolphin Tale

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

There are few actors that can upstage legendary Oscar-winning thespian Morgan Freeman. But of course that's exclusively including human actors. In his latest movie, Freeman's co-star is a dolphin.

"That's why they play such big roles (in our lives)," said Freeman recently about the animals' natural acting ability. "And it's like they're doing their own thing — you don't know if they're trained to do this stuff or if they're showing off. I'm fascinated by them because I've seen them do stuff like that in the wild."

Specifically, Freeman is talking about Winter, the charming subject and star of this Friday's release of Dolphin Tale, an inspiring story of a young marine mammal that was saved with the use of a prosthetic after losing its tail in a tragic accident.

"I think this is a particularly special dolphin," insisted director Charles Martin Smith. "She has so much personality and she's such a character. She's basically the equivalent of a human 10-year-old ... when I first started working on the script for this I sat with her for three days and watched her and (observed) all the things that she does that I could write into the script."

Among those traits included some interesting human-like habits and even an affinity for human contact. For Freeman, it was an agreeable improvement on some of his previous co-stars.

"I worked with a bear one time and the guy said 'don't look him in the eye'. That's a note I need — don't look the damn thing in the eye," laughed Freeman. "(Winter) has been in this aquarium for most of her life and even if she was wild, it wouldn't bother me because somehow it appears that (dolphins) have the same kind of affinity for us as we have for them."

Freeman's

animal love

► Morgan Freeman on his love of animal movies:

"The first book I ever read was about a horse — Black Beauty — and I was lost in animal stories after that," said Freeman. "We have a kind of symbiosis with animals that we interact with."

Fleshing out female characters on TV

► Whitney Cummings hopes her new show challenges female TV stereotypes

When provocative comedy writer and performer Whitney Cummings was developing her own self-titled series, she didn't have to dig deep into her imagination to come up with a unique lead role.

Her own life was already far different from those of the female characters she was seeing in most TV comedies, and seemed a rich source from which to mine funny stories that her generation could relate to, she says.

"I found myself not finding anyone on TV, except for maybe Tina Fey, who I thought was a strong, funny, outspoken woman who is in charge," the 29-year-old statuesque standup star, who lives in Los Angeles, said during a recent stop in the city.

I should have been fired: Sheen

CHRIS PIZZELLO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Charlie Sheen seems to have buried the hatchet.

Appearing on Thursday's Tonight Show, the former star of Two and a Half Men radiated a forgiving mood toward his old workplace. Asked by host Jay Leno if he's still angry at the sitcom's producers and network, he said no: He would have fired himself had he been in their shoes. Then he added with a laugh, "Well, maybe not like they did."

Sheen was dumped last March after the actor railed against his bosses, and they blasted him for his unpredictable behaviour as a drug-abusing, reckless playboy. "It was bad," Sheen said, summing up the clash, "and I own my part in that, and I just want to make everything right."

Asked why he thought he should have been fired, Sheen explained, "I should have been a little more responsible about the condition I was showing up in."

He told Leno he has not had any contact with his former castmates, but said he felt no animosity toward them.

The hit CBS comedy returns today for a new season with Ashton Kutcher as Sheen's replacement.

He praised Kutcher as being "accomplished," and when asked if he had any advice for his successor, he said he'd like to give him a hug and tell him, "Make me proud, dude."

Was life with Jen 'pathetic' for Brad?

► Actor in damage control after recent comments about his ex-wife

Brad Pitt is doing damage control after he made some less-than-complimentary remarks to Entertainment Weekly about life with Jennifer Aniston.

"It started feeling pathetic. It became very clear to me that I was intent on trying to find a movie about an interesting life, but I wasn't living an interesting life myself," Pitt told the magazine.

"I think that my marriage (to Aniston) had something to do with it. Trying to pretend the marriage was something that it wasn't."

But Pitt insists he's been taken out of context. "It grieves me that this was interpreted this way," Pitt says in a statement.

"Jen is an incredibly giving, loving and hilarious woman who remains my friend. It is an important relationship I value greatly. The point I was trying to make is not that Jen was dull, but that I was becoming dull to myself — and that, I am responsible for."

The more the merrier

Maybe David and Victoria Beckham aren't done having kids after all, as the soccer star hinted to Ellen DeGeneres that they'd be welcome to another baby. "If we were lucky enough to have another one, it would be great," he said.

"We always spoke about having a big family. We love children."

"We are very blessed to have four healthy children, so if one comes along that would be amazing."

DeGeneres pointed out that another child would make five, bringing them to a family of seven, David's lucky number.

"What can I say? I love the number seven," he responded.

Squash gets you fall ready

► This Squash Crumble will work as a side dish or even as a tasty dessert

The natural sweetness of butternut squash makes it a wonderfully versatile ingredient. This spiced and baked dish, for example, can be served as a sweet side alongside a roast and the traditional fixings or topped with ice cream for a delicious dessert.

Preparation:

- 1 Heat oven to 180 C (350 F). Coat a 23-by-33-cm (9-by-13-inch) baking dish with cooking spray.
- 2 To make filling, in bowl mix brown sugar, cornstarch, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. Set aside.
- 3 Bring pot of water to boil. Add squash and cook 6 minutes, or until just tender. Drain thoroughly. In bowl, mix squash and apples. Add brown sugar mixture, toss well; transfer everything to baking dish.

- 4 To make topping, in a food processor combine flour, sugar, cinnamon and salt. Add butter and pulse until mix resembles coarse crumbs. Add pecans and pulse to chop and combine. Sprinkle topping evenly over apples and squash. Bake for 45 minutes, or until squash and apples are tender.

Ingredients:

Filling:

- 45 ml (3 tbsp) brown sugar
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) cornstarch
- Pinch salt
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) cinnamon
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) nutmeg
- 1 butternut squash (about 900 g or 2 pounds), peeled, seeded and cut into 2.5 cm (1-inch) chunks
- 3 baking apples (such as Granny Smith), peeled, cored and cut into small chunks

Topping:

- 250 ml (1 cup) all-purpose flour
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) granulated sugar
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) cinnamon
- Pinch salt
- 75 ml (5 tbsp) butter, cold
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) pecans

A medley of roasted tomatoes & sausage

Preparation:

- 1 Heat the oven to 150 C (300 F).
- 2 On a rimmed baking sheet, combine tomatoes, garlic, peppers, red onions, mushrooms, sausage and carrots. Drizzle oil over vegetables, sprinkle with oregano and basil. Use hands to toss vegetables and sausage until coated, then spread in an even layer.
- 3 Place in oven and roast for 40 minutes.
- 4 Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Add the spaghetti and cook according to package directions. Drain, then divide between serving plates. Spoon the roasted vegetable and sausage mixture, including any juices that have collected in the pan, over the pasta. Top with Parmesan and pine nuts and serve.

► This pasta recipe serves six.

Ingredients:

- 500 ml (1 pint) cherry tomatoes, halved
- 4 cloves garlic
- 2 green bell peppers, cored, cut into thick strips
- 1 large red onion, roughly chopped
- 250 ml (8-oz) package white button mushrooms
- 375 ml (12-oz) package cooked Italian chicken sausage, cut into 1-inch chunks
- 4 large carrots, peeled and cut into 1.3-cm (1/2-inch) chunks
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) olive oil
- 5 ml (1 tsp) dried oregano
- 5 ml (1 tsp) dried basil
- salt and black pepper
- 450 g (1 lb) spaghetti
- Grated Parmesan cheese
- 60 ml (1/4 cup) toasted pine nuts

Reclaiming the backyard

► New book shows how to find stuff for your yard without making a trip to a store ► Learn what you can do

Trash talk has helped Matthew Levesque fashion an inventive career in garden design.

He holds “creative reuse” workshops, and his “yardscaping” creations made from locally available items have become austerity-chic collectibles.

“I’m trying to get people thinking about alternative sources for their materials,” said Levesque, author of The Revolutionary Yardscape. “Lots of landscape people are beginning to pay attention.”

A slumping economy is forcing consumers to be as imaginative about finding landscaping supplies as they are about using them. Levesque is a master at crafting yard decor from cast-off materials that otherwise would stuff landfills or litter vacant lots. He turns toolboxes into planters, and makes walkways from tumbled, recycled glass. He uses doors for fences and links small ceramic tubes into rain chains, a substitute for downspouts.

“It’s the art of using what we’ve got,” said Levesque, who also operates what he describes as a “thrift store for house parts” in San Francisco. “I use my garden as a test kitchen, trying things out to see if they work.”

Ignore the cookie-cutter garden furnishings sold at big box stores and nurseries, Levesque said. Instead, reclaim building

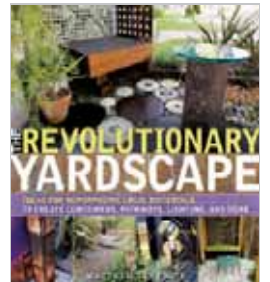

► This walkway is made from scrap steel plates and remnant cedar planks from a fence.

materials with recognizably local origins so you can make one-of-a-kind statements.

“What is a flowerpot but a hole with a bottom and sides? Through reuse, a great many things can fit that description,” he said.

Where should you look for reclaimable building supplies? Salvage yards are great spots to start, Levesque said.

“They generally offer goods at reasonable prices, and often the proceeds go to an affiliated non-profit endeavour,” he said. “This is a quick place to find beautiful old windows, doors, racks of sheet metal and other useful stuff.”

CHEWING OVER USE OF PLASTIC NIGHT GUARDS

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

I don’t know very much about the plastic used to make night guards. However, my mom happens to be a dental assistant.

She was able to get the manufacturer’s Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS) for night guards from a dental lab.

Unfortunately, the MSDS sheet isn’t all that helpful. Half of the ingredients are ethyl methacrylate (48 per cent), hydroquinone (one per cent) and P-methoxyphenol (one per cent).

The other 50 per cent of the ingredients are called “Confidential Ingredient A”, registered as a trade secret. Ethyl methacrylate is a base material for coatings and adhesives.

It’s used in a host of things, from resins to paper finishing to dental products.

I can’t speak to its safety, and the trade secret ingredient is a huge stumper.

You don’t need to be related to a dental assistant to find out about the products used in your mouth.

Ask your dentist to find out more about the product and get contact information for the company.

Another point worth mentioning is that the Canadian Dental Association is one of 12 national organizations representing all areas of the health sector, along with the David Suzuki Foundation, that have produced a joint statement spelling out a commitment to creating an environmentally responsible health sector.

Percentage of educated Canadians high: OECD

A new study has found Canadians' education levels are outpacing those of many countries.

Statistics Canada reports 92 per cent of adults aged 25 to 34 had completed secondary school compared with 80 per cent of those aged 55 to 64.

The 12-percentage-point gap was smaller than the average across the 34 countries of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), where the proportions stood at 81 to 61.

StatsCan also says the proportion of adults aged 25 to 64 with a college diploma or a university degree rose to 50 per cent from 39 per cent between 1999 and 2009, outpacing the average OECD increase.

Canada's employment rate for adults aged 25 to 64 who had not completed secondary education was 55 per cent in 2009, while the rate for graduates of college and university programs was 82 per cent.

Canada devoted six per cent of its gross domestic product to educational institutions in 2007, about the same share as the OECD average.

If your emails are responded to with snappish, unpunctuated replies —

► Save the LOLs and BRBs for your pals outside of work.

no "Hey, how are you," no "Nice to hear from you" — then you might, she suggests, keep your correspondence curt.

"But if it's a person who has a more personal touch, then I would reciprocate," she adds.

"Those niceties are very important in building relationships, even online — and especially online — because we need that glue to hold us together."

Older workers, Thompson notes, can be made uncomfortable by an overload of web abbreviations.

"Baby boomers are going to expect a fairly concise, but formal email," she says.

And they'll likely place

a greater importance on spelling, she adds.

"Some people will really consider your spelling, whether you know the difference between 'your' and 'you're.' Just respect the person to whom you're writing. That's what etiquette is."

Think a head

Personalize your signature

► If a picture's worth 1,000 words, then a low-resolution headshot can't hurt.

► "Attach a small photo in your signature," says Khamisa. "The next time you meet, you'll notice a difference in how you're received."

Rays continue to close gap on Red Sox

The ball struck David Price in the chest and bounced in the air, a hit that could have devastated Tampa Bay's playoff chances.

But Evan Longoria fielded the carom and threw to first for the out, Price stayed in the game and the Rays beat the Red Sox 8-5 yesterday to take three out of four in Boston and close within two games in the AL wild-card race.

The Red Sox have lost 11 of 14 and are left rooting for the New York Yankees, who play the Rays seven times in the last 10 games.

"To be able to do this against this team here, if that can't bolster your confidence nothing really can," Rays manager Joe Maddon said. "Now it becomes more viable. You can see the light at the end of the tunnel, and now it's not attached to an oncoming train."

Brady runs wild in Week 2

► Patriots quarterback Tom Brady, left, celebrates a touchdown last night in Foxboro, Mass.

► Patriots quarterback unstoppable again ► Sets pair of NFL records

Big-yardage games are becoming routine for Tom Brady. So is setting records.

Brady threw for 423 yards yesterday — six days after setting a single-game team record of 517 — and led the New England Patriots to a 35-21 win over the San Diego Chargers.

"It seems like he's always great," linebacker Rob Ninkovich said. "He's the best quarterback in the league."

The NFL mark for most yards passing in the first two games of a season, 854, lasted about three hours. Carolina rookie Cam Newton set that before Brady ended the day at 940 yards.

Brady became the first player in NFL history to follow a 500-yard passing performance with a 400-yard game, and the Patriots scored 30 points for the 10th straight regular-season game. He threw three touchdown passes and went 31 for 40 with no interceptions as the Patriots (2-0) scored on each of their four first-half possessions.

The Chargers (1-1) turned the ball over inside the Patriots' 35-yard line three times, leading to 17 points. They also were stopped on a fourth-and-goal at the one-yard line, and the Patriots started a 99-yard drive that ended with one of Brady's two scoring passes to Rob Gronkowski.

Brady, who connected with seven receivers, said simply, "We were able to spread the ball around."
